DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities:

The applicant is advised to update information cited under the "Cross-Reference to Related Applications" in page 1 of original specification.

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

2. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

3. Claims 17-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Claims 17-20 cite a machine-accessible medium containing instructions for modifying an email attachment. In order for medium claims to be statutory, the claims must cite in a tangible readable medium. However, claims 17-20 disclose the accessible medium is signal-bearing in page 19 of the original specification which is considered as non-tangible medium. Therefore, claims 17-20 are directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

4. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

5. Claims 1-2, 4-13, 15-18, and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Erev et al. (U.S. Publication No. 2003/0084106).

Re claim 1, Erev discloses in Figures 2-5 a method for replacing an email attachment of an email with a call (e.g. abstract and Figure 2 wherein the call is the reference to the location of the attachment which stored in the media store server), the method comprising:

removing the email attachment from the email, thereby producing a stripped email (e.g. RS2 in Figure 2 which remove the attachment from the email message generated from the attachment box); storing the email attachment (e.g. storing the attachment as multi-media data in the media 2 in Figure 2);

adding the call to the stripped email (e.g. generate a reference as call and attach to the email prior sending to the RC 1 in Figure 2), wherein the call is configured to retrieve the email attachment upon activation by a recipient of the stripped email (e.g. paragraphs [0009] and [0019]); and forwarding the stripped email with the call to the recipient (e.g. from RS2 to RC1 in Figure 2).

Re claim 2, Erev further discloses in Figures 2-5 receiving a request for transmission of the email attachment in response to activation of the call (e.g. paragraph [0019] wherein the request is made from the media client to the media store); and transmitting the email attachment to the recipient in response to the request (e.g. the media store send the attachment file as multi-media data corresponding to the reference to the media client).

Re claim 4, Erev further discloses in Figures 2-5 partitioning a mail server to create the attachment server (e.g. paragraph [0089] wherein the mail server and media server are located in the same machine).

Re claim 5, Erev further discloses in Figures 2-5 storing comprises storing the email attachment in storage associated with an attachment server (e.g. file is stored from SC1 to media store in Figure 2), the attachment server being configured to transmit the email attachment in response to activation of the call by the recipient (e.g. paragraph [0035]).

Re claim 6, Erev further discloses in Figures 2-5 adding the call comprises adding code to the email, the code being configured to automatically execute upon display of the email via an email client associated with the recipient, to request transmission of the email attachment (e.g. paragraphs [0032-0035] wherein the code is the reference in form of URI).

Re claim 7, Erev further discloses in Figures 2-5 adding the call comprises adding a hyperlink to the email, wherein the hyperlink is configured to initiate code associated with the email attachment to transmit the email attachment to the recipient (e.g. paragraphs [0005 and 0032-0035]).

Re claim 8, Erev further discloses in Figures 2-5 the hyperlink, upon activation, initiates access to an Internet protocol address associated with the email attachment (e.g. paragraphs [0032-0035] wherein the code is the reference in form of URI).

Re claim 9, it is a device claim of claim 1. Thus, claim 9 is also rejected under the same rationale as cited in the rejection of rejected claim 1.

Re claim 10, it is a device claim of claim 2. Thus, claim 10 is also rejected under the same rationale as cited in the rejection of rejected claim 2.

Re claim 11, it is a device claim of claim 3. Thus, claim 11 is also rejected under the same rationale as cited in the rejection of rejected claim 3.

Re claim 12, it is a device claim of claim 4. Thus, claim 12 is also rejected under the same rationale as cited in the rejection of rejected claim 4.

Re claim 13, it is a device claim of claim 5. Thus, claim 13 is also rejected under the same rationale as cited in the rejection of rejected claim 5.

Re claim 15, it is a device claim of claim 7. Thus, claim 15 is also rejected under the same rationale as cited in the rejection of rejected claim 7.

Re claim 16, it is a device claim of claim 6. Thus, claim 16 is also rejected under the same rationale as cited in the rejection of rejected claim 6.

Re claim 17, it is a computer-accessible medium claim of claim 1. Thus, claim 17 is also rejected under the same rationale as cited in the rejection of rejected claim 1.

Re claim 18, it is a computer-accessible medium claim of claim 2. Thus, claim 18 is also rejected under the same rationale as cited in the rejection of rejected claim 2.

Re claim 20, it is a computer-accessible medium claim of claim 4. Thus, claim 20 is also rejected under the same rationale as cited in the rejection of rejected claim 5.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

6. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

7. Claims 3, 14, and 19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being obvious over Erev et al. (U.S. Publication No. 2003/0084106) in view of Hanna et al. (U.S. 7,054,905).

Re claim 3, Erev fails to disclose in Figures 2-5 authenticating the request prior to transmission of the email attachment. However, Hanna et al. disclose the step of authenticating the request prior to transmission of the email attachment (e.g. 314 in Figure 3 as authentication is required prior downloading attachment from server). Therefore, it would have been obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the at the time the invention is made to add the step of authenticating the request prior to transmission of the email attachment as seen in Hanna et al.'s invention into Erev et al.'s invention because it would enable to allow only authorized user to view the attachment for security reason (e.g. col. 5 lines 7-16).

Re claim 14, it has similar limitations cited in claim 3. Thus, claim 14 is also rejected under the same rationale as cited in the rejection of rejected claim 3.

Re claim 19, it is a computer-accessible medium claim of claim 3. Thus, claim 19 is also rejected under the same rationale as cited in the rejection of rejected claim 3.
